ALMA collaborates with graduates from Central Saint Martins during London Design Festival (21 – 25 September 2015)

THE LONDON
DESIGN FESTIVAL

Alma, luxury leather specialist and champions of British design, are collaborating with young graduate designers from Central Saint Martin's for a 'pop-up' exhibition during this year's London Design Festival. The six young designers will be working with a range of leather offcuts from Alma to create new designs, from cabinets and lighting to ottomans. The pieces will be exhibited at the Alma factory in Whitechapel's Greatorex Street, the historic heart of the leather industry.

Founded in 1938, Alma are purveyors of British design with a long standing history of supporting young designers by donating leather offcuts to students' design projects. Synonymous with quality and craftsmanship, Alma originally built a solid reputation within the fashion industry. Today, Alma designs and produces exceptional and bespoke leather interiors, furniture and furnishings as well as a range of hand-made bespoke leather accessories and handbags from its workshop in Whitechapel. With a flagship showroom in Mayfair, Alma has a diverse collection of more than 100 different types of leather at any one time and Alma's team of specialists can advise on a range of bespoke styles, finishes and applications.
